Auburn Presents First Annual Festival Of Arts

General Alumni Gifts Reach $109,000

Rate of contribution to the General Alumni Campaign gradually increased through the past month, largely as a result of the dedicated effort of a few hundred alumni volunteers in 52 personal solicitation areas throughout the nation.

E. T. York Directs Federal Extension

Dr. E. T. York, Jr., '42, Auburn Agricultural Extension Service Director for the past two years, has left his post here on a year's leave of absence to assume directorship of the Federal Extension Service of the USDA (see feature on Dr. York elsewhere in this issue).

Taking over duties of Auburn Extension direction in Dr. York's absence is Dr. Fred R. Robertson, who has served as associate director during Dr. York's tenure. Dr. Robertson is directing Extension activities now under an appointment as acting director.

Ralph R. Jones '35, veteran Extension Service employee, has been named acting assistant director to assume duties formerly carried out by Dr. Robertson.

Dr. Robertson holds B.S. and M.S. degrees in agriculture from the University of Tennessee and a doctor's degree from Harvard, where his grade average was the highest in the agricultural group of about 25.

Before coming to Auburn Dr. Robertson served as assistant county agent in Tennessee, five years as an agricultural economist with TVA and for three and one-half years as professor of agricultural economics at Pennsylvania State University.

Since coming to Auburn in 1959 he has been in charge of program planning and coordination.

As a result pledges and donations to build an alumni memorial building to house the proposed Nuclear Science Center reached a total of $109,978.50 by April 19. Cost of the building is estimated at $617,000, which is the goal of the General Alumni Campaign.

Although a major portion of the new contributions came from personal solicitations, Development leaders noted a gradual increase in the number of responses to mail solicitations.

Development Chairman Alvin A. Biggio '26, and Alumni President Ben Gilmer '26, look hopefully to the increased activity in both personal solicitation and response to the mail campaign as signs that General Alumni are rising to the challenge and will move forward to a rapid completion of the campaign so that actual construction of the Nuclear Science Center may begin as soon as possible.

To date 2,593 have pledged and contributed to the Development Campaign—1,945 through the Advance and Special Gifts Phase; 648 to the General Alumni Campaign.

Auburn University will devote the month of May to its first annual Festival of Arts, which will feature music, drama, dances, lectures, symposiums, debates, and exhibits—art and others. Festival events will be open to the public without admission charge.

Festival participants from departments throughout the University issue a cordial invitation to Auburn alumni to attend events of their choice. Clarence E. Cook, Auburn Union manager, says, "Your Auburn Union will be pleased to send a Festival Brochure containing full details of events—including dates, time, location on campus, and background information—to any alumnus interested. Just drop us a card or letter."

The Festival will include every phase of musical activity—vocal and instrumental concerts and recitals by students, faculty and visiting musicians. Following is a partial schedule:

Teresa Rinaldi Concert—The current Miss Alabama—a former student of Andrew Gainey who starred here this month in the Auburn production of Carousel and currently a student of John D. Howell and the Juilliard School of Music—is rated by many as the most promising lyric soprano that Alabama has produced in recent years. (Check with Auburn Union to ascertain date and place on campus).

Senora Renard Piano Recital—Born in Santiago, Chile, Senora Renard later studied at the National Conservatory of Music and the Stern Conservatory in Berlin. Now a member of the Auburn music faculty, she has played in Washington and New York. Her recital in Langdon Hall at 8:15 on May 3 will consist of sonatas by Scarlatti, Father Soler, and Scriabin; Spanish selections by Salla, Ravel, and Villalobos; and works of Liszt and Chopin.

Jazz-In-The-Round

Jazz-In-The-Round, a concert of modern jazz played by a trio led by pianist Bob Richardson, will take place in the Union Ballroom on May 8 at 8:15 p.m.

Auburn University Orchestra Concert—Under the direction of Edgar Glyde, assisted by Robert Koper, the University Orchestra will present a concerto program featuring five soloists on May 1 at 8:15 p.m. in the Auburn Union Ballroom.

Musical Matinee—A vocal program, which will feature Madame Lilly Justus, soprano, accompanied by Bette Miller. Madame Justus was born in Hungary and received her training at the Budapest Gymnasium and the Royal Hungarian Academy of Music. She is currently a member of the Auburn music faculty. Musical Matinee is scheduled for May 4 at 2:30 p.m. in Langdon Hall.

Elijah, an oratorio by Felix Mendelssohn, will be presented by the Auburn University Mixed Chorus under the direction of Prof. Martin Rice on May 4 at 8:15 p.m. in the Union Ballroom.

Auburn Woodwind Quintet will perform a quintet by Haydn and contemporary quintets at 8:15 p.m. in Langdon Hall on May 5.

Auburn Knights Concert—On May 9 at 8:15 p.m. in Union Ballroom the Knights will present favorite arrangements in their own inimitable style.

Concert of American Music—Phi Mu Alpha "Sinfonia" and Delta Omicron, national music honorary professional fraternities, will present—on May 16 at 8:15 p.m. in Union Ballroom—outstanding works of American composers and will feature Elliot Carter's "The Defense of Corinth," four hand piano, and Vittoria Gianinni's "The Canticle of the Martyrs."

Auburn University Faculty Madrigal Singers will present on May 18 at 8:15 p.m. in Union Ballroom a program consisting of madrigals, French chansons, German polyphonic lieder of the 16th and 17th centuries, and English and American vocal chamber music. Assisting the Madrigal Singers will be the Auburn Recorder Group.

Auburn University Men's Glee Club, assisted by the Auburn Men's Octet and Quartet, will present a program of inspirational classics for male chorus, Civil War songs, sea chanteys, folk songs, and spirituals in Union Ballroom at 8:15 p.m. on May 23.

Auburn University Choir, under the direction of Martin Rice, will present a concert of inspirational choral classics, folk songs, spirituals, and selections from the musical comedy "The Music Man" in Union Ballroom at 8:15 p.m. on May 25. (This concert will also be presented on a 10-day tour of five Southern states in June).

Auburn Concert Band—Under the direction of Dr. Bodie Hinton the Concert Band will present (date to be set) a program of music to "suit the taste of everyone." Currently Dr. Hinton's band contains more than 120 instruments, the largest concert band in Auburn's history.

In addition to musical performances the Festival of Arts will feature:

Stage Door by the Auburn Players under the direction of Bob Knowles at Players Theatre at 8:15 on May 4-6 and May 9-13. Stage Door, written by Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman, was first produced on Broadway with the late Margaret Sullivan in the leading role, later produced in Hollywood with Katherine Hepburn starring. It promises to be one of the Auburn Players' most memorable productions.

A Symposium of Art by the Auburn English Department; an outstanding lecturer by the Auburn Historical Society; a series of art exhibits arranged by the School of Architecture and the Arts for Biggin Hall, featuring works of faculty, students, and others; a fashion show to present creative designs by students of the School of Home Economists; a Symposium on Existentialism led by Prof. Richard Owsley, specialist in religious philosophy; and several other lectures, symposiums, concerts, and exhibits in process of arrangement as The Alumnews goes to press.

F. R. Robertson . . . heads AU Extension

E. T. York . . . federal administrator

Behind The Headlines—

A Comment With Mixed Emotions

The Alumnews greets with mixed emotions Dr. E. T. York's departure to Washington to serve as administrator of the Federal Extension Service. A 1942 graduate of Auburn, E. T. York, Jr., becomes the first Southerner and the youngest man ever chosen as head of this vital agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. His appointment reflects honor upon Auburn, but it also represents a decided loss for Auburn, even though Dr. York leaves his post as Extension Director here only on a leave of absence.

Two years ago Dr. York succeeded another distinguished Auburnite, P. O. Davis '16, as director of the Auburn Agricultural Extension Service. Mr. Davis had served Auburn and Alabama agriculture long and well; the rapidity with which the Extension Service has during the past two years built upon the foundations laid by Mr. Davis and others is a measure of Dr. York's abilities in leadership (See "Extension Success Story" on page 3).

Alabama agriculture appears to be on the threshold of explosive growth. If the present bright promise is to come to fruition, the Auburn Agricultural Extension Service must play its educational role with unusual devotion and imagination. It is, we believe, fully prepared to do so: Extension workers in general are enthusiastic and capable; they are dedicated to a new spirit of cooperation; and the leadership, even in Dr. York's absence, is very strong with Dr. Fred R. Robertson at the helm and numerous capable and tried Auburn Extension leaders assisting.

Nevertheless, Auburn will miss the quiet confidence, courageous imagination, practical wisdom, and unselfish dedication of E. T. York, Jr., and it is our hope that the call to a higher duty does not keep him long away from The Plains.

Old Fashioned—In these columns we keep insisting that the fate of democracy hinges on improvement of our educational system. The idea is not precisely new. In fact, just to show how old fashioned we are, note that Aristotle in the 4th Century B.C. said: "All who have meditated on the art of governing mankind have been convinced that the fate of empires depends on the education of youth."

The Mother Profession— "Teaching is the profession on which all other professions depend. The training of competent engineers, lawyers, physicians, scientists, and other professional groups is directly related to good teaching in public schools," said Dean Truman Pierce last month in announcing the Auburn School of Education's forthcoming selective admissions program. The idea has been stated before, but few of us have thought enough about its implications.

A Damning Apathy—Alabama is beset with a malignant apathy that has induced a state-wide paralysis on matters pertaining to education. With schools and colleges struggling under the problems of proration heaped upon those of already inadequate financing and expanding enrollment, those people in the best position to shake and shape public opinion in the State might as well be doing nothing: the newspaper with the largest circulation in Alabama has exerted itself far enough to utter some editorial platitudes about the necessity of securing relief from local sources; unexplored is the question of what local sources the State and Federal governments have not already pre-empted; unrecalled is the fact that no state agency other than education is operating on less than a full budget and that some even have surpluses; unrecognized is the fact that inadequate education is destroying the State's ability to survive economic competition from other areas.

Of A Bliss That Hastens Sunset

By JERRY RODEN, JR., '46

"... The world's greatest need now is for communication," says Bishop James A. Pike of the Episcopal Diocese of California in the New York Times Magazine of April 2. After citing tragic failures to communicate in the home and in national life, Bishop Pike continues, "The lack of ability to communicate is nowhere more apparent than in our international relationships." This failure to communicate in our international relationships offers a particular challenge to American higher education and merits our attention here.

Perhaps the most constant barrier to communication with our fellowmen in other countries is our presumptuous tendency to consider those who disagree with us as enemies, fools, or, at best, hopeless illiterates. Visiting lecturers at the fourth annual Auburn Conference on International Affairs (April 6-8) demonstrated the fallacy of this attitude by establishing that misunderstandings largely of our own creation constitute the greatest of the United States's many serious problems in Latin America. They emphasize that these misunderstandings have grown out of our almost willful ignorance of Latin American people, their history, culture, and social and economic problems.

Dispelling such ignorance and the blind presumption that results from it constitutes not only a challenge but also a moral obligation for institutions of higher learning, particularly those that assume the title university. Actually, our colleges and universities have begun assuming in recent years the full responsibility for such obligation and are now making serious efforts to fulfill it. But they need strong public support and encouragement to take the further steps necessary.

Auburn University in particular needs greater moral and financial support as she seeks to develop programs to dispel ignorance of international affairs and cultures of other peoples and nations. Let us take Latin America as a concrete example for illustration. This year Auburn devoted its fourth annual Conference on International Affairs to our neighbors to the south with particular emphasis on Mexico and the Caribbean Area. From some standpoints, the conference was excellent. With one possible exception, the six visiting lecturers ranged from outstanding to superb in both knowledge and ability to communicate.

As a result of this ACOIA meeting many students and faculty members alike are not only better informed about our Latin American neighbors but are also keenly aware of the desirability, nay of the necessity, to know them much better. A further result is that the next meeting of ACOIA will be devoted to Latin America, with the burn alumni and a few smaller newspapers, are trying to shake the public out of its lethargy. Many more voices are needed. Alabama's educational problems are complex but not insuperable, if subjected to some realistic thinking and imaginative action by the entire state.

A Certain Blindness—Engrossed in a number of affairs and disappointed at the initial progress of the General Alumni Campaign for the Auburn Development Program, we have been guilty of a certain narrowed view that has obscured one important facet, perhaps the most important, of what is now happening. If support from alumni in general for the Development Program is considerably below expectations (although now improving), the efforts of a few hundred alumni volunteers in 52 personal solicitation areas throughout the land has been nothing less than inspiring. Many of these dedicated Auburnites have not only answered a call for volunteers but have also exceeded that which they were requested to do. May their tribe increase.

possibility that ACOIA may become permanently an Auburn Conference on Latin American Affairs. Certainly a desire for Latin American studies in depth has grown here as a product of this year's conference.

The success of this year's ACOIA also reveals a problem. Suppose that as a result of inspiration received from the conference an Auburn student decides that he would like to dig deep into the subject. If he goes to the university catalogue, he will find one five-hour course in Latin American History, eight courses in the Spanish language, and three in Portuguese. He will find only these and no more, but during the conference he will have learned that many other universities now have special inter-departmental curricula and some even special departments and schools with graduate studies up to the Ph.D. in Latin American Affairs.

Course offerings in Russia and the Far East are just as limited numerically as those for Latin America; for Africa and the Middle East no special courses appear in the catalogue. Auburn's poverty in courses on international affairs is the product of several factors, the chief of which is the old problem of inadequate financial support. As a Land-Grant institution, Auburn has specific statutory obligations in the agricultural and mechanical sciences; she does not have such a legal obligation for international affairs, only the great moral one mentioned above.

Throughout most of her history, Auburn has had difficulty in securing the financial support necessary to maintain quality in those areas in which she has specific statutory obligations. There have been virtually no funds for establishing comprehensive studies in other areas. Despite this fact, Auburn has sought in various ways to fulfill the other obligations of a university—and within the limits of her support has done well: for example, the History Department here was one of the first to offer specific courses in Russia and the Far East and now despite a staff numerically inadequate, the Foreign Languages Department offers courses in Russian. But the limitations have been too great for any truly significant progress.

However, it is inaccurate to blame Auburn's limitations in courses on international cultures and affairs simply upon inadequate financing. Many of our Alma Mater's troubles lie deeply rooted in an outmoded provincialism of this area that, through many of her students and alumni as well as the public at large, operates to hamper some of the best efforts of her faculty and the most progressive visions of her administration. Financial support for desirable expansions is lacking largely because too many of us remain blissfully ignorant of the urgent need and moral obligation to establish an intelligent basis for communicating with our fellowmen in other nations.

However, the debacle of Cuba at our doorsteps stands as a grim reminder that blissful ignorance is a luxury that we can no longer afford. Of course, I am not attempting to suggest that we can solve all international problems and prevent such setbacks as the Cuban revolution by adding a few courses in the languages, literature, history, philosophy, and economics of other nations around the world. But increasing the number and scope of such courses in our universities seems the most logical way to begin securing the deeper understanding necessary for reasonably effective communication among the inhabitants of the world—and if we don't improve that communication, we might as well as admit that for democracy as we conceive it, if not for all civilization, sundown approaches.

State Increase Doubles U.S. Average—

Farm Income Responds To AU Plan

Efforts to double Alabama farm income during the decade from 1960 to 1970 met with resounding success during the first year of operation. Net income per farm in the state rose seven per cent in 1960, while that for the nation as a whole rose only four per cent. Alabama's gross farm income for 1960 was $542 million, four per cent or $20 million above that of 1959, while the gross farm income of the nation rose only two per cent.

Agricultural economists quickly traced a big chunk of the increased gross income to an Auburn-initiated program. Alabama farm income from cotton increased $14 million in 1960, while income from cotton in the five other major cotton states of the Southeast declined six per cent.

An intensive effort to increase Alabama income from cotton was the first major step of a cooperative program launched by the Auburn Agricultural Extension Service under the leadership of Dr. E. T. York, Jr., '42. In the program, the Extension Service not only sought to improve its own direct extension agent-to-farmer educational program but also to secure the cooperative assistance of all farm related industries and organizations.

Ag Hill farm leaders hail the initial success of this effort as an indication that the cooperative program—which includes not only cotton but all important farm products—may enable Alabama to reach an annual farm gross of $1 billion well before the target date of 1970. Last year's success, under extremely adverse weather conditions for both field crops and livestock and poultry, is likely to have a snowballing effect as farmers and farm related industries realize the full impact of the possibilities before them.

Auburn To Hold Music Festival For Children

On May 24 from 1:30 to 2:30, a chorus of more than 500 youthful voices will ring out in favorite songs over the Alabama Educational Television Network (Channels 2, 7, and 10). The voices will be those of elementary school children from various points in South Alabama gathered in Auburn for their own Music Festival.

Accompanying the children's chorus will be the Auburn Youth Orchestra, a 22-piece group composed primarily of stringed instruments played by Auburn Elementary School children under the direction of Wendy Glyde, Auburn High School senior. Also accompanying on some pieces will be the Auburn University Band under the direction of Dr. Bodie Hinton.

The Music Festival is the climax to an Auburn Educational Television program, "Music for Listening," beamed to the classrooms each Friday at 9:30. "Music for Listening" is conducted by Dr. Ernest Justice, Auburn education professor, and his talented wife, Mrs. Mary Justice. They also conduct an evening program "Music for Teaching" over Auburn ETV facilities.

The ETV Music Festival for children will be produced and directed by Bill Smith of Auburn ETV in the Student Activities Building. Supplying remote facilities for the broadcast and cooperating otherwise with Auburn will be WSFA-TV of Montgomery.

Auburn ETV will tape the Music Festival program and re-broadcast it at 9:30 on May 26 so that visiting children may sit in their own classrooms and watch themselves performing at Auburn.

W. C. Sugg Receives Upjohn Co. Promotion

Director of Domestic Branch Sales is the new title of W. C. (Red) Sugg '31. The promotion comes in Sugg's thirtieth year with the Upjohn Company of Kalamazoo, Mich. His first successful sale came in depression-year 1931 when he sold himself as the man for Upjohn's Pensacola, Fla. territory.

Quickly demonstrating unusual sales ability, he successively moved to Columbus and Atlanta, Ga., and Jacksonville, Fla. By World War II he was back to Atlanta as Divisional Sales Manager. In his eight years there, he promoted Upjohn's interest in the veterinary field, an interest that materialized into a new division for his company.

Continued promotions brought Sugg to the home office in Kalamazoo. His most recent post was Assistant Director of Marketing Staff Services. Active in civic affairs, he headed the 1960 Community Chest-Red Cross Fund in Kalamazoo, and is a former national president of the Auburn Alumni Association.

In announcing his promotion, his company publication said he well fitted the description attributed to Eddie Rickenbacker of the top man in any sales organization: "He is a man of faith . . . in our country . . . in our competitive enterprise system . . . in his company, in what he is selling, and faith in himself."

Library Receives Gift For Latin-American Materials

(From the Auburn Library Information Bulletin)

A special gift for the procurement of Latin-American materials has been received by the Auburn University Library, according to an announcement by Clyde H. Cantrell, Director of Libraries.

The fund will be used to expand the Library's rapidly growing collections in Hispanic literature, history, economics, and political science. The amount of the gift, $1,000.00, will be divided in this manner: one-fourth for publications issued in the United States; one-fourth for magazines and periodicals published in Spanish-speaking nations; and one-half for books published in Spanish-speaking nations.

A small committee of the faculty is advising Director Cantrell in the purchase of books and other materials which will support and further the teaching interests of the several departments concerned.

The donor, Mrs. Rebecca Stodghill Miles, is an alumna and longtime friend of Auburn University. After completing her B.S. degree at Auburn, she was awarded the M.A. degree by Columbia University, her subject of study being Hispanic History and Literature.

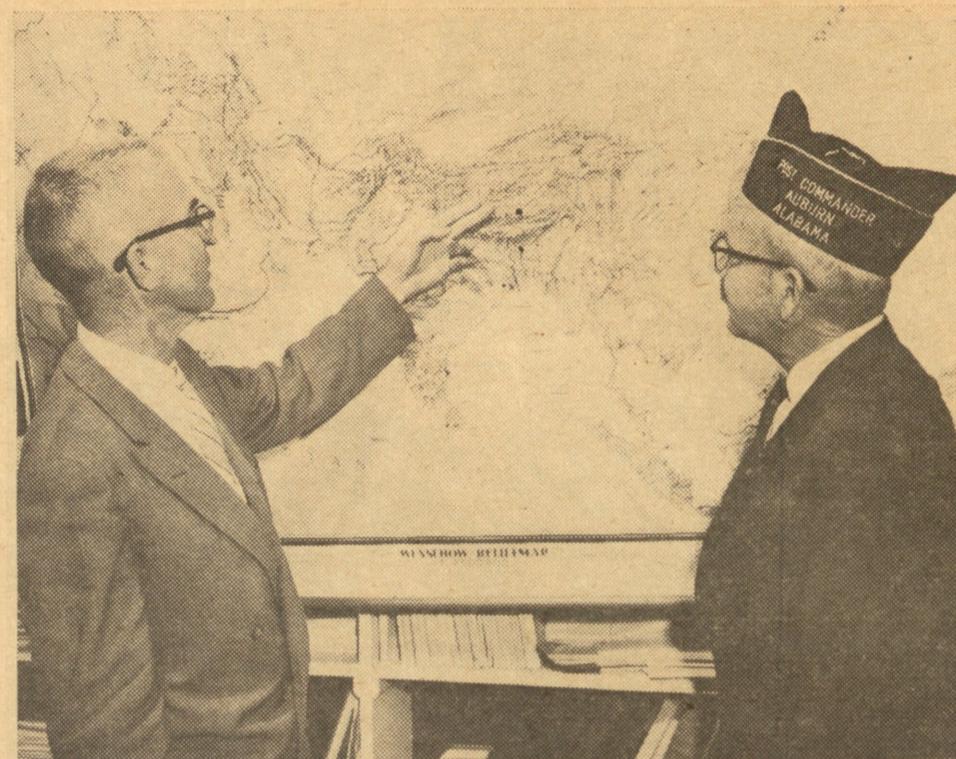

Mrs. Miles, who taught in this area for several years, was most recently a teacher of Spanish in one of the high schools of Columbus, Georgia. She has recently moved to Philadelphia, Mississippi, but her interest in Auburn University continues unabated.

At Age 27, Byrd Whigham Enters Semi-Pro Football

Byrd Whigham '55, who was too small for Auburn football and almost too small for basketball and baseball in which he earned two letters each here, played right-half for the Tampa Buccaneers semi-pro football team this past fall.

Beginning semi-pro football at the age of 27 and keeping an eye out for a pro bid, Whigham isn't really looking for belated fame as a gridiron star. He's seeking qualifications that may enable him to break into the collegiate football coaching ranks after several years of successful high school coaching.

His size?—Through the years Byrd has added a few solid pounds to move from his high school graduation weight of 125 to his present 155.

RUSSIA AND THE ORIENT—Auburn History Prof. O. T. Ivey and local VFW Commander Leon Gray discuss Russia and Asia, areas in which they have a strong mutual interest. Prof. Ivey teaches Russian and Far Eastern history. Mr. Gray heads the E. W. Allgood Memorial Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, which has pledged an annual contribution to the Auburn University Library to build up its collection of books in Russian and Asian history and literature.

VFW Gives Books To Aid Democracy

Auburn's Ernest W. Allgood Memorial Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars has pledged itself to raise funds for the Auburn University Library as part of the VFW fight against Communism.

The VFW Post has unanimously adopted a plan to contribute a minimum of $250 annually to build up the University Library section on history and literature of Russia and Asia.

A permanent Library Committee, established under the leadership of Commander Leon A. Gray, will maintain liaison between the VFW Post and Auburn Director of Libraries Clyde H. Cantrell and Prof. O. T. Ivey, Auburn specialist in Russian and Asiatic history. It will serve both to check on library needs and to provide funds to meet them.

Speaking of the VFW action, Commander Gray says, "Auburn VFW members believe that to fight Communism effectively we must know well our friends and enemies in Europe, Asia, and elsewhere.

"I am impressed and deeply disturbed by news reports which indicate that millions of Russians make a point of gaining an intimate knowledge of American people — their literature, history, culture, and psychology — while we rely upon a few specialists to furnish us what information we have on the Russians.

"Indeed, the average American knows little about Russia and even less about trouble spots and potential trouble spots in Asia, Africa or Latin-America.

"The VFW Post at Auburn has undertaken this project to help the Auburn University Library as a means of encouraging general education on world politics, economics, and culture. We want to have the books with the answers there when our professors inspire students to penetrating questions and subsequent research. We hope that others will follow our example."

APPOINTED TO EXAMINERS—Dr. Paul M. Newberne '50 has been appointed to a five-year term on the Alabama State Board of Examiners for the healing arts. An animal pathologist for the Auburn Agricultural Experiment Station, Dr. Newberne as a member of the State Board will conduct examinations in pathology for prospective medical doctors, osteopaths, and chiropractors. Dr. Newberne holds D.V.S. and M.S. degrees from Auburn and a Ph.D. from the University of Missouri; he was recently elected to membership in the American College of Veterinary Pathologists, thus becoming one of a select group of only 100 that has been certified by the Board of Examination of ACVP.

ACOIA lecturers discuss Latin American Thought with two Auburnites. Seated (l. to r.) are Dr. William Manger, former Assistant Secretary General of the Organization of American States; Dr. J. Riis Owre, Dean of the Graduate School at the University of Miami (Fla.) and former Co-Director of the University of Miami Hispanic-American Institute; and Dr. Basil C. Hedrick, Assistant Director of the Latin American Institute of Southern Illinois University. Standing are Ronnie McCullars of Anniston, General Chairman of ACOIA, and Capt. John Napier, Auburn AFROTC and ACOIA Discussion Moderator.

Latin Americans Are Individualists

Auburn's Student Senate sponsors an annual conference on International Affairs with the support of the University administration and faculty. The fourth annual ACOIA meeting this month (April 6-8) marked a new high in general interest and effective presentation as visiting lecturers, students representatives from 13 other colleges, a number of Auburn students and local faculty members took a long hard look at Latin America and U. S. relationships with it.

Speakers at the conference emphasized the need for establishing effective communication among the nations of the Western Hemisphere, communication based on mutual understanding, respect and sympathy. They stressed the hardy individualism of Latin Americans, an individualism that makes North Americans appear as stereotyped conformists, but noted that socio-economic conditions in Latin America make many of its countries susceptible to Communist influence.

Implicit throughout the conference and explicit often was the concept that Latin-American individualism can be a valuable aid to the development of stable democracy in this hemisphere—if North Americans will help Latin American countries achieve their destinies in terms of their own needs and cultures rather than attempt to force ready-made U. S. ideas upon them.

Speakers at the conference praised the Auburn audiences for their attentiveness, attitude, and the intelligence of questions submitted during discussion periods following lectures and in round-table sessions.

Stan Sykes of Luverne, ACOIA Organization Chairman; Guest Lecturer Earl T. McGowin, Alabama State Docks Director; and Auburn President Ralph B. Draughon discuss Caribbean trade and trouble spots throughout Latin America.

Company Matching Plans Afford Alumnus Chance To Double Gift

Each of the following 115 companies have matching gift programs for higher education. The programs vary in their operating details, but all are essentially alike in that they match—usually dollar for dollar—the contributions of employees to their alma maters. Auburn alumni working for these companies will assure Auburn of two-dollars for each dollar that they contribute if they make certain their gifts are properly recorded.

For The South—Special Urgency

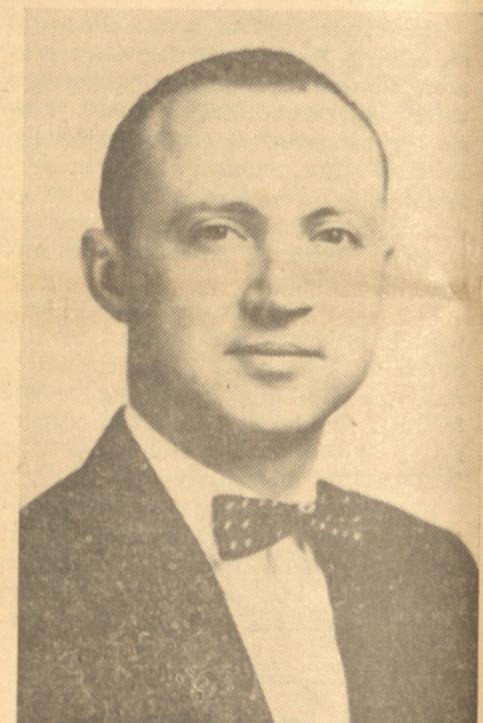

"We in the South will feel the problem of increased enrollment and increased need for higher education with a special urgency. In the race for accomplishment, our region is starting from farther back than most of the other regions of the nation. Secretary of Commerce.

Auburn Graduates Earn $75 To $125 Per Month

(From The Auburn Alumni Quarterly, Nov., 1912)

The Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, in the opinion of The Advertiser, is the finest institution of its kind in the South. It affords the students thorough technical training in dozens of vocations, in addition to its academic features. From it graduate young men every year who are ready after two weeks fishing and frolicking at home with the folks, to go out into the world and hold positions which bring them salaries ranging in size from $75 to $125 a month, with the best opportunity for advancement.—Editorial in The Montgomery Advertiser, Sept. 2, 1912.

By 1965, there will be at least 1,200,000 students in Southern colleges, or about 400,000 more than at present.

Dr. Charles Walton Chosen Kentucky's Top Professor

Dr. Charles A. Walton, B.S. in Pharmacy, '49 and a native of Auburn, received the singular honor of becoming the first recipient of the University of Kentucky's "Most Outstanding Professor" Award given at the fourth annual Research Conference at Lexington, on March 16th. This annual award, which includes $500 cash, is given to the professor judged most dedicated to undergraduate teaching and service to his students. Dr. Walton, who joined the University of Kentucky faculty in 1950, is Professor and Head of the Department of Materia Medica of the College of Pharmacy.

Dr. Walton holds membership in Phi Delta Chi, Rho Chi, Phi Kappa Phi, Scabbard and Blade, Phi Lambda Upsilon, Sigma Xi, Lambda Chi Alpha, American Pharmaceutical Association, Kentucky Pharmaceutical Association, American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Association of University Professors, and the New York Academy of Sciences. He received his Ph.D. degree from Purdue University in 1956, and is well-known throughout Kentucky for his work in the establishment of Poison Control Centers. Dr. Walton is a registered pharmacist in Alabama and Kentucky.

For York—Another 'Youngest Ever'

By ROBERT R. CHESNUTT '37

Auburn University's E. T. York, Jr. '42, has added another "youngest ever" title to his already long string of such. At 38, he's now the youngest administrator of the Federal Extension Service in its 47-year history.

York came to Auburn two years ago as the youngest director of a state Extension Service. A few years before, he gained national recognition by becoming the 30-year-old head of North Carolina State College's agronomy department, one of the country's biggest and best.

And so it has gone for York, who was awarded a commission in the Regular Army at the age of 20, after being named a distinguished military graduate at Auburn. After three years of military service and a like period in graduate school, he received his Ph.D. degree in agronomy from Cornell University at 26.

Within three years after completing his graduate work he was promoted to full professorship; within another year he was made department head.

Much more satisfying than "youngest ever" to York—and to Alabama—is the fact that he is the first southerner ever to be appointed administrator of the Federal Extension Service. A committee of state Extension directors from all sections of the U. S. virtually drafted the former DeKalk County farm boy for the job after he had been in Extension only two years.

York has a year's leave from Auburn University to take the Washington post in the U. S. Department of Agriculture under Orville Freeman, Secretary of Agriculture.

"Extension is one of the major divisions of Auburn and of every other land grant university and college, so I'll be working closely with these institutions in Extension's continuing effort to help improve the country's entire economy through fuller use of human and physical resources," commented York. He has a wide background in all three divisions of land grant college activities—teaching, research, and Extension. Also, he has studied farm problems of other countries in extensive trips throughout Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia.

Extension—often referred to as the educational arm of the Department of Agriculture—operates in every country in the U. S. and in Puerto Rico. It is supported by county, state, and federal appropriations of more than $150 million.

Extension has some 15,000 professional employees, most of whom are county farm agents, home agents, and their assistants.

York came to the front as a state Extension director because of his vigorous program in Alabama. He reorganized several areas of the work, expanded the state staff of specialists, and emphasized advanced training of his staff. He improved the relations with other groups working to enhance the state's economy.

More specifically what caught Washington's attention was York's plans for rural resource development in Alabama. His ideas were set forth in a recent Auburn University publication, "Rural Resource Development—Alabama's Path to Progress."

Better use of local resources, especially in rural areas, was just what Secretary of Agriculture Freeman and others of President Kennedy's administration had been looking into. York's publication seemed to Washington to pretty well set a pattern for a national effort to use the country's resources more fully and wisely.

What makes York tick so well? Those who know him best list three things—an excellent mind, complete dedication to the job, and an unusual ability to win friends and influence people.

So the youthful York, who in a short time has compiled a long entry for Who's Who in agriculture and education has set himself to the big opportunity of making the Extension Service play a larger role in improving the income and lives of the 13 million families it served last year and the many more millions it will serve in the future.

Thirty-One Alumni Have Earned General Rank

Our listing of Auburn generals and admirals last month made at least one important omission: not listed was Maj. Gen. Thomas G. Hearn '13, U.S. Army, retired, of Palo Alto, Calif. Gen. Hearn brings our list of Auburnites who have earned stars to 31.

Another mistake in last month's listing was the transposition of middle and last names of Brig. Gen. Thomas Nelson Jones '28.

Auburn Foreign Students Come From Many Lands

Registration records for last quarter show that Auburn currently has 73 foreign students from 25 countries around the world.

Represented by one or more students at Auburn University are: Argentina, Brazil, China, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Iran, Iraq, Japan.

Also Jordan, Korea, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, the Philippines, Puerto Rico, United Arab Republic, and Venezuela.

Enrollment At N.Y. State To Jump 35,000 By 1965

Last year, State University of New York submitted a $353 million building program to Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and New York legislative leaders. University officials planned the program to increase capacity of various units of the University from the then current 38,000 students to more than 73,000 by 1965.

Later stories from New York indicate that the University received approximately all that it asked for and that it is now preparing to take care of the "war baby" boom that begins hitting the college campus this coming fall.

In Alabama in 1959, the State Legislature passed a $100 million bond issue for school construction in the State. Of that amount $23,564,600 went to State colleges and universities for buildings generally reported as necessary for the then current enrollments. The remaining $76-plus millions went for the construction of badly needed high school and grammar school buildings. No building appropriation has yet been made that really anticipates the "war baby" tide scheduled to begin hitting the Alabama college campuses this fall. College enrollment in the State before the tide hits stands at approximately 43,000.

THE MAN WITH THE SMILE—That Georgia Tech alumnus at Brown Engineering in Huntsville (R. L. Puckett, left above) keeps smiling, and since the Alumnews editor and Ruben T. Moore '49 (right above) have to live with that smile, we have decided to print this picture so that you can share the sting of it—or preferably, help wipe it off (see story and R. T. Moore's letter below).

That Yellow Jacket Keeps Stinging

The following letters came, as the salutations indicate, not as letters to The Alumnews per se. They are reprinted here because the writers of each were persuaded to overcome scruples of personal modesty in order to aid further a good cause.

Ruben T. Moore's letter refers to a front page editorial in the February Alumnews, in which we related Bob Puckett's challenge to Auburn alumni. Mr. Puckett is confident that Auburnites can't "bat in the same league" with Georgia Tech men when it comes to financial support of Alma Mater.

Mr. Puckett's confidence stems from the fact that for four consecutive years more than 40 per cent of Tech alumni have contributed to the Georgia Tech Annual Roll Call, Tech's equivalent of the Auburn Development program. His challenge, issued several weeks ago, still stands as the accompanying picture and our front page development story both show—considerably less than 10 per cent of Auburn Alumni have contributed to the Development program.

Dear Mr. Biggio:

Since my last letter to you in which I rejected your request for support to my school for its science development program, I have given this matter a great deal of thought. Even though I am in a training program with Travelers Insurance Company and do not receive a high salary while in training, I am pledging to one share of the development fund. Maybe later when I am assigned and am on a salary plus commission basis, I will be able to contribute more.

I have noticed in the Alumnews that the number of people contributing in my class and in the classes of recent years are very few. I know it is hard for some to contribute since they are just getting started on new jobs, but I can't see why everyone who has graduated in recent years can't contribute at least one share. It doesn't feel good to contribute unless it hurts a little. Living in this high cost area on my salary, I am lucky to save a small amount of money each month. But, fifty dollars a year out of that is but a small token to the amount of money that was spent on my education at Auburn by the taxpayers of the state of Alabama.

Well, I will close wishing you the best of luck in your fund raising drive.

Yours War Eagle,
Thomas F. Borst '60

Mr. Jerry Roden, Jr., Editor
The Auburn Alumnews
Auburn University
Auburn, Alabama

Dear Jerry,

The "Georgia Tech Man Challenges . . ." headline feature in the Alumnews delighted me as I was the Auburn Alumnus in the article. Excelling my mere delight, however, "the challenger"—Mr. Robert L. Puckett, Georgia Tech '54—has been buzzing around (smilingly) in "Yellow Jacket" heaven ever since the February issues were delivered to Auburnites at Brown Engineering in Huntsville. True to the peculiar social habits of the genus Vespa, his solo flight has induced a swarm of happily humming Jackets who are now busy planting sharp little barbs into the hides of heretofore complacent Tigers. It is only a matter of a few days before Auburn Alumni located in the remotest corners of the world will be suffering from those condescending smiles.

But this could be only the beginning. I have knowledge that Bob is writing a letter to Mr. Roane Beard, Executive Secretary of the Georgia Tech National Alumni Association, advising him of the details of this situation. In short, if the Auburn Development Program does not reach its goals, we must expect that the Yellow Jacket Alumni will publicly demand—and rightly so—to see the promised "Rambling Wreck" imprinted above the hallowed tower of Samford Hall! Let the mighty War Eagle bestir himself and soar to the majestic heights that are his true domain—far above any stratum that the Georgia insects could even imagine existed!

Place my name among Mr. Biggio's volunteer workers.

A stung Tiger,
Ruben T. Moore '49

P.S. I wish to add this foot-note about my good friend Bob Puckett. He represents the best in clean competitive spirit. His challenge was made in the unselfish hope and belief that a great rival can be even greater. I know that he feels singularly honored by the printing of the challenge and that he sincerely hopes that Auburn University will benefit because of it.

May 13 Ceremony To Honor Hutsell

Alumni, students, and other friends will honor Wilbur Hutsell, "the dean of Southeastern Conference track coaches," here on Saturday, May 13.

Dr. Walton is professor and head of the department of materia medica of the College of Pharmacy.

Paul E. Barr is a partner in the firm Barr and Tune Architects in Florence.

CHAMPIONSHIP FORM—Aubrey Davis (167 lbs.) above was one of Coach Arnold Umbach's top Tigers on the mats this year (see Norm Carlson's column).

Before spring practice, Jordan listed these problems:

1. Development of depth at halfback, quarterback and right tackle.
2. Development of promising youngsters to help veteran John McGeever with the offensive fullback load, due primarily to the need for McGeever's presence full time in the defensive lineup.

3. Finding replacements for punter Joe Dolan and placement man Ed Dyas, both of whom will be in medical school when the Tigers trot out to meet Tennessee in Knoxville next Sept. 30.

Taking these problems one at a time, a certain amount of depth has been developed at halfback with McGeever moving over to help at LHB on occasion offensively and the emergence of some sophs.

Sophs who fit in right now appear to be Nick Bonura at LHB and George Rose and Reggie Allen at RHB. Rose is on the second unit and the others pair off on the third unit.

Sophomore Mailon Kent has taken the No. 2 quarterback job, and needs only experience to become a good, representative SEC player. At right tackle, sophomore Jimmy Jones and junior George Gross should do an adequate job behind veteran Dave Woodward.

Sophs Bill Burgess of Birmingham and Larry Rawson of Pensacola must come through at fullback to ease McGeever's load and to permit him to play part time offensively at LHB.

In the kicking department it looks as if Bonura, a 195-pounder from New Orleans, will replace Joe Dolan unless Bo Davis decides to come back for his final season.

Field goal and PAT work will be handled by junior Herman Wilkes, junior Gerald Dill or sophomore Wooddy Woodall. The first pair are strong, erratic kickers, while Woodall is accurate from in close, but lacks leg strength for longer boots.

"These boys mentioned are, of course, all question marks until proven in the SEC," says Jordan. "But, we say, based on spring training they appear to be the ones who must help solve the problems if we're to maintain our present standards."

Spring Sports Roundup

Coach Erk Russell's baseball team, the hardest-hitting team seen in the Southeastern Conference in years, will attempt to hold its first place standing as the race moves down to the wire in early May.

And with some pitching help, this looks likely.

Going into the Georgia series, Russell's team was hitting .317, with only two regulars batting under .327, and one of those on a hitting streak which saw his average climb from .206 to .255 in three games.

Auburn is 6-2, leading the SEC Eastern Division prior to the Georgia invasion. The Bulldogs, at 5-3, trail by one game.

Coach Wilbur Hutsell's track team, blessed with the finest weight man in Southern track history in senior Richard Crane, looks forward to playing host to the SEC meet, May 12-13 at Cliff Hare Stadium.

The golf team of Coach Sonny Dragoin, getting par or better efforts out of sophs Hill Boswell and Morris Slingluff and senior Henry Wheaton, figures strongly in the SEC meet, set for May 3-6 in Athens, Ga.

Auburn is an even .500 in matches thus far, but has come on strong, gaining a tie with powerful Georgia in the last match in the SEC.

And the tennis team, sparked by George Bagwell, Paul and Jerry Anderson, stands 2-3 with FSU, Georgia, Georgia Tech and Mississippi remaining before the SEC meet in Gainesville May 11-13.

AUBURN AT BAT—Tiger Second Baseman Jim Douglas rounds first after tapping out a single against Kentucky, while Kentucky's First Baseman scoops the throw from the turf of Plainsman Park.

McGeever—Phantom Backfield Man

By NORM CARLSON

Although designed to further the cause of winning football games, the switch of John McGeever this spring is going to drive some printers daffy before it's over.

Actually, McGeever is Auburn's No. 1 fullback and will be so listed in such media as football programs and flip cards provided in the press box.

He's also Auburn's No. 2 left halfback as far as offense goes. So he'll be listed in this position.

Knowing the printers in this area, we know there's nothing they hate more than anything smacking of a typographical error. And listing one man twice looks questionable.

So this is public notice to all printers that John McGeever is a left halfback, a fullback, a linebacker on defense and also a safetyman.

He'll also be assigned to blowing up the ball before each game.

Auburn basketball coach Joel Eaves has pulled quite a trick in signing the State of Georgia's top two basketball players to Tiger grants.

Lee DeFore, 6-6 Sylvan of Atlanta, led the state in scoring with a 24.6 average. He was Most Valuable Player in the Georgia AAA tourney, which his team won for the second year.

He shared the Atlanta Tipoff Club's award as the state's outstanding player with another big, tough lad whose endeavors were outstanding last year.

This would be 6-7 Freddie Guy, a product of Avondale outside Atlanta, the state's second leading scorer with a 23.4 average and the closest competition DeFore had for the MVP award in the state tourney.

Eaves and assistant Bill Lynn didn't do bad in Alabama, either. They signed Joe Newton, 6-9 center from Fayette and a boy who should provide scoring punch in the pivot for years to come. He's not just big, he's strong and likes to mix it up under the boards.

Also joining the Tiger fold were 6-2 guard Tim Pearson of Tuscaloosa's state champions, a never-say-die sort of boy who shoots, feeds, plays defense and does all those things which have typified Tigers of late like Porter Gilbert, Ray Groover, Jimmy Fibbe and so forth.

Last, but certainly not least, comes 6-1 guard Billy Biles of Decatur, a lefty who rates among the finest ball handlers Eaves has seen in high school and who is also a good shot.

Coach Umbach

Umbach's wrestling team recently captured its 15th straight SEIWA title, while the head man ran his match record up to 119-16 during the past season.

Umbach's champions this year were James Grimes (123-lb.); Don Houser (147-lb.); Aubrey Davis (167-lb.); Garner Hastings (191-lb.) and George Gross (heavyweight).

Hastings and Gross were winning second straight titles and Davis was voted the meet's Most Outstanding Wrestler.

AU Campus To Become Arboretum

By E. L. McGraw '41

Buildings of the School of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Station, Auburn University, have received a face lifting with a complete landscaping job valued at $10,000.

Credit for the job goes to friends of Auburn in the Alabama Nurserymen's Association, for the donation of shrubs, Auburn Grass Farm and King's Nursery, Auburn, for grass used, agricultural students who spent 770 man hours setting the grass, and personnel of the department of buildings and grounds.

Members of the Alabama Nurserymen's Association offered to help in the development of the landscape plan so that a better selection of plants might be used for beauty and instructional purposes. The objective is to develop an arboretum type campus at Auburn University to show what type plants can be grown in this area and to give an example of landscape plans to use. This planning will allow students and participants in various nurserymen's short courses to study a complete landscape plan.

A total of 707 shrubs and 64 trees and a complete sod for all lawn areas were set. A total of 75 species of plants was used, most of which were broad and narrow leaf evergreens.

Trees believed to be valuable in this area were used in the plan. Large trees included were: Southern magnolia, white oak, deodara cedar, American holly, cypress, common China fir, Formosa sweetgum, sugar maple, silver maple, Eastern white pine, and live oak. Small trees used were: alnus crabapple, devilwood osmanthus, saucer magnolia, and strawberry madrone.

Complete landscape plans were drawn by Homer S. Fisher, assistant landscape architect, department of building and grounds and associate professor of horticulture. Sodding of the lawn areas was supervised by Dr. D. G. Sturkie, agronomist and Keith Patrick, assistant professor of agronomy.

Donors of grass were: Auburn Grass Farm, Kings Nursery, Auburn, and the International Paper Company of Mobile that planted an area using a new product called turfizer.

Donors of plants included: Arnell Blackwell, Owen Blackwell, Jr., Blackwell Nurseries, Inc.; Tom Dodd, Jr., Tom Dodd Nursery Co., Inc.; Walt Grimes, Grimes Nurseries; C. E. Stephens, Semmes Nurseries, Inc.; and C. R. Stephens, Stephens Nursery, all of Semmes, Alabama.

Tom Sawada, Overlook Nurseries,

Inc.; and Paul Dodd, Paul Dodd Nurseries, of Mobile; T. C. King, King's Nursery, and Holly Mitchell, Holly Mitchell Landscape Service, Auburn; Marcus D. Byers, Sr., M. David Byers, Jr., Byers Nursery Co., Huntsville; E. E. Foster, Foster Nursery Co., Bessemer; C. J. Hayden, Athens Nursery Co., Athens; and Fletcher Ponder, Tallapoosa County Nurseries, Dadeville.

Five large camellia plants were taken from the collection of the late M. J. Funchess, former director of the Agricultural Experiment Station, and worked into the landscape plan.

Foundry Lab—Another Improvement

Three years ago, the Auburn Foundry Laboratory was so obsolete that Engineering Dean Fred H. Pumphrey considered eliminating it. However, he permitted Prof. Dan T. Jones '13, head of Industrial Laboratories, an opportunity to see what interested industries would do to help modernize the Foundry.

A year ago The Alumnews reported the results of the efforts of Prof. Jones, the Birmingham Chapter of the American Foundryman's Society, and generous industries: "Auburn students and faculty members are now using the most modern metallurgical laboratory in the South."

Now as a result of the continued help of the Birmingham Chapter of AFS and the generosity of the Westinghouse Electric Co., Prof. Jones has just installed a new high frequency inductance furnace of 30 kilowatt capacity—to further improve the already excellent foundry.

The new furnace adds greatly to the metallurgical research potential of the Foundry Laboratory. Prof. Jones says, "We can melt any kind of metal now."

A leading volunteer in securing equipment donations for the Foundry has been Harry Burns '40, Auburn Mechanical Engineering graduate and vice president of Stockham Valve & Fittings Co. of Birmingham.
